The Prophet’s letters to kings

Introduction

In the month of Muharram in the seventh year of Hijrah, the Prophet (peace & blessings of Allâh be upon him) sent letters to different rulers of the world. All the letters were simple and had one purpose, to invite them to accept Islam. No king or leader would consider even reading a letter or message until they were sure it came from the person claiming to have sent it. So a seal was made for the Prophet (peace & blessings of Allâh be upon him). On all the letters the seal of the Prophet (peace & blessings of Allâh be upon him) was stamped, which read ‘Muhammad, Messenger of Allâh.’ In display form, Allâh was at the top, Messenger in the middle and Muhammad at the bottom. Also, all the letters were hand-given.

The climate was right because a ten-year truce had just been called. This meant the Prophet’s envoys could travel without fear (Ziā al-Nabī, IV: 179). Overall, Islam was on the ascendancy.

Overview

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>King/Leader</th>
<th>Prophet’s envoy sent to them</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>نجاشي</td>
<td>عمرو بن امي الضمري</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>هرقل</td>
<td>دحی بن خلیفة الكلیبي</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>برویز</td>
<td>عبد الله بن جحاة السهمی</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>مقووس</td>
<td>حاطب بن وهب</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>هؤدیة بن علي الخنفی</td>
<td>سلطب بن عمرو العامری</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>حارث بن ابي شمر الغسائي</td>
<td>شجاع بن وهب</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The King of Abyssinia, Negus (al-Najāshī).

Al-Najāshī was the title given to anyone who was the king of Abyssinia (just like Fir’awn was the name of anyone who was the king of Egypt). His actual name was Ashamah (اصحمة).

Here is the letter Prophet Muhammad (peace & blessings of Allâh be upon him) sent him (Ziā al-Nabī, IV: 181-2):

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم من محمد رسول الله الوالي المهاجرين و النجاشی ملك الحبشة اما بعد فاني احمد الیک اللہ لا اله الا هو الملك القدوس السلام المؤمن المهاجرين و النجاشی ملك الحبشة اما بعد فاني احمد الیک اللہ لاأله الا هو الملك القدوس السلام المؤمن المهاجرين و النجاشی ملك الحبشة اما بعد فاني احمد الیک اللہ لاأله الا هو الملك القدوس السلام المؤمن المهاجرين و النجاشی ملك الحبشة اما بعد فاني احمد الیک اللہ لاأله الا هو الملك القدوس السلام المؤمن المهاجرين و النجاشی ملك الحبشة اما بعد فاني احمد الیک اللہ لاأله الا هو
In the name of Allāh, the most Merciful, the most Compassionate. From Muhammad, the Messenger of Allāh, to al-Najāshī the king of Abyssinia. For indeed I praise to you Allāh, there is no God except Him, the Malik, the Quddūs, the Salām, the Mu'min, the Muhaymin. And I testify that Isa, son or Maryam is the spirit of Allāh and His word, He cast it to Maryam, the Virgin, the clean, the pure, the sanctified, the protected. She became pregnant and so Allāh created Isa from his spirit and blew it into him like he created Adam with His hands.

I call you to Allāh, the One, He has no partner. And I call you to his obedience. If you follow me and believe in what I have brought, then I am the Messenger of Allāh. So I call you and you people to Allāh the Almighty. For indeed I have conveyed the message and advised you. I have sent the son of my uncle Ja'far and a group of Muslims. And peace be on the one who seeks guidance.

When al-Najāshī received the letter, he treated it with utmost respect. He remarked:

اشهد بالله أنه النبي الأمي الذي ينتظره الالكتاب
‘I bear witness that he is the Ummī Prophet (peace & blessings of Allāh be upon him) for whom the People of the Book waited for.’

He wrote a letter back in which he said that if he could, he would certainly have travelled to al-Madina to meet him. He embraced Islam at the hands of Ja'far (Ziā al-Nabī, 4: 183).

The Prophet (peace be upon him) sent a second letter after this, and al-Najāshī kept this and the first safely and securely in a box. As he did so, he said (Ziā al-Nabī, IV: 184):

لن تزال الحبشة بخير ما كان هذان الكتابان بين اظهنا
Abyssinia is in good hands so long as these two letters are in front of us.

Two years later (in the ninth year of Hijrah, when the Prophet was returning from Tabūk), al-Najāshī passed away. In Sahīh al-Bukhārī, it is mentioned that the day al-Najāshī passed away, the Prophet (peace be upon him) broke the news of his death to his Companions saying:

مات اليومٌ رجل صالح فقوموا فصلوا على أخيكم أصحاب
‘Today a very pious person has passed away. Stand up and offer the funeral prayer of your brother al-Najāshī.’

It is narrated by Sayyida A’isha (may Allāh be pleased with her) that after his death, the people noticed a constant light emitting from his grave.

عن عائشة رضي الله عنها قالت لما تحدث ابن يزاز يزاز تبرع في قبره نور (ضياءٌ، 2: 377)

The Hanafi scholars state that the Funeral prayer offered by the Prophet (peace & blessings of Allāh be upon him) was a unique gesture for al-Najāshī. Otherwise, Muslims are not permitted to perform Salāh al-Janāza when the body is absent.

Of all the men who received the letters of the Prophet (peace & blessings of Allāh be upon him), he was the most fortunate.
Hirqal (Heraclius)

The Prophet (peace & blessings of Allāh be upon him) sent his trusted and handsome Companion Dihya to Hirqal. First, Dihya was instructed to go to Busra, in order to meet Hārith ibn Abī Shammar. He would provide a trusted guide to take Dihya to Hirqal. This guide’s name was Addī ibn Abī Hātim.

At the time, Hirqal was in Jerusalem. He was there to fulfil a solemn promise (a Nazr to walk to Jerusalem to perform prayer al-Masjid al-Aqsa after defeating the Persians). Hirqal was a worried man. He had seen signs that his rule was coming to an end. He was a keen astrologer. Very recently, he saw a particular star in the sky that, after interpretation, meant his land would be overcome by men who practice circumcision and that another religion was appearing soon.

It was at this precise moment that Hirqal’s trusted aide came into the room, to inform him that a man had appeared wanting to give Hirqal a letter. He talked about a man who was calling to one God, Allāh. Immediately, Hirqal instructed him to find out if this man (Dihya) was circumcised. After confirmation he was, he read the letter. The letter was:

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم من محمد عبد الله و رسوله الي هرق عظيم الروم سلام على من اتبع الهدى اما بعد فان ادعوك
بداية الاسلام اسلم و اسلم يعطق الله اجرك مرتين فان توليت فعلك اثم العرسين و باهل الكتاب تعاروا تكلمة
سواء بيننا و بينكم الا عبد الله ولا تشرك به شياً ولا تخذ ببعضاً أربابا من دون الله فان تولوا فقولوا اشهدوا باننا مسلمون

In the name of Allāh the Compassionate, the Merciful, from Muhammad the slave of Allāh and His Apostle to Hirqal the ruler of Byzantine. Peace be upon him, who follows the right path. Furthermore I invite you to Islam, and if you become a Muslim you will be safe, and Allāh will double your reward, and if you reject this invitation of Islam you will be committing a sin by misguiding your Arisiyn (peasants). (And I recite to you Allāh’s Statement:)

'O people of the scripture! Come to a word common to you and us that we worship none but Allāh and that we associate nothing in worship with Him, and that none of us shall take others as Lords beside Allāh. Then, if they turn away, say: Bear witness that we are Muslims’ (3:64).

When Hirqal read the letter, he was moved and sweat droplets began to appear on his forehead. He told his aides that certain people were in town, who were also from the same region of Hijaz. He instructed his men to find them and bring them to him.

Abū Sufyān was taking full benefit of the war-free pact rectified in the form of Hudaybiyya. He was in Gaza on trading expeditions. Abū Sufyān and his men were rounded up and brought to Hirqal. Abū Sufyān was a non-Muslim at the time. Hirqal called him and had a detailed conversation with him too about Muhammad (peace & blessings of Allāh be upon him).

Hirqal: What is his family status?
Abū Sufyān: He comes from a noble family.
Hirqal: Has anyone claimed to be a prophet before him from amongst you?
Abū Sufyān: No.
Hirqal: Was anybody from his ancestors a king?
Abū Sufyān: No.
Hirqal: Do the noble (i.e. rich & famous) or the poor follow him?
Abū Sufyān: The poor.
Hirqaːl: Are his followers increasing or decreasing?
Abū Sufyān: They are increasing.
Hirqaːl: Are any of his followers becoming Muslims & then leaving Islam later?
Abū Sufyān: None.
Hirqaːl: Have you accused him of lying ever, meaning even before he announced he was a prophet?
Abū Sufyān: No.
Hirqaːl: Has he broken his promises?
Abū Sufyān: Not yet. We have a truce with him at the moment [Hudaybiyya], I do not know what will happen to it in the future.
Hirqaːl: Have you ever had a war with him?
Abū Sufyān: Yes.
Hirqaːl: What has been the result?
Abū Sufyān: He is sometimes victorious, sometimes we are.
Hirqaːl: What does he order you to do?
To worship Allāh, to pray, to speak the truth, to be chaste and to be good to relatives.

After hearing all these answers from Abū Sufyān, Hirqaːl gave a review of them. In short, all the answers assured him that Prophet Muḥammad was the final Messenger of Allāh...

Hirqaːl: What is his family status?
Abū Sufyān: He comes from a noble family.
Hirqaːl: All prophets and messengers come from noble and respected families.
Hirqaːl: Has anyone claimed to be a prophet before him from amongst you?
Abū Sufyān: No.
Hirqaːl: If the answer had been ‘yes’ I would have thought this man is following the previous man’s statement.
Hirqaːl: Was anybody from his ancestors a king?
Abū Sufyān: No.
Hirqaːl: If the answer had been ‘yes’ I would have thought this man is trying to get back his family’s kingdom.
Hirqaːl: Do the noble (i.e. rich & famous) or the poor follow him?
Abū Sufyān: The poor.
Hirqaːl: All true prophets have been followed by the poor.
Hirqaːl: Are his followers increasing or decreasing?
Abū Sufyān: They are increasing.
Hirqaːl: This is a sign of a true religion.
Hirqaːl: Are any of his followers becoming Muslims & then leaving Islam later?
Abū Sufyān: None.
Hirqaːl: This is a sign of a true religion.
Hirqaːl: Have you accused him of lying ever, meaning even before he announced he was a prophet?
No.
Hirqaːl: I certainly know that whosoever does not lie to the people, he will certainly not lie to Allāh.
Hirqaːl: Has he broken his promises?
Abū Sufyān: Not yet. We have a truce with him at the moment [Hudaybiyya], I do not know what will happen to it in the future.
Hirqaːl: Prophets never lie or cheat.
Although he was still a non-Muslim at the time, Abū Sufyān realised how important Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was; that even the king of Byzantine was aware of him.

Deep inside, Hirqal knew that Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was the final messenger. All the signs were there. But he was a Christian. More importantly, he was a powerful leader. Hirqal took the Prophet’s representative (Dihya) to a secret place and said:

‘I know Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) is the genuine prophet of God. All his characteristics are listed in our books. But I fear that if I declare my faith the Byzantines will not spare my life.’

Later in Homs, Hirqal called his Byzantine leaders into a room in his palace, and closed all the doors. He announced:

'O Byzantines! If success is your desire and if you seek right guidance and want your empire to remain then give a pledge of allegiance to this Prophet (i.e. embrace Islam).'

In a huge commotion, all the leaders ran to the doors to flee in fright and despair. They could not believe what they just heard from Hirqal. Hirqal realised their hatred to Islam and he could not convince them otherwise. He called them back and said, ‘I was only testing you; I wanted to see how faithful [to me] you all are.’

This was the last of Hirqal (Ziā al-Nabī, IV: 185-192).

What we learn from Hirqal’s episode

*Good manners makes a person; Abū Sufyān did not talk about how much worship Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) performed. He talked about his character.
*Even the enemies could not hide the perfection of Muhammad’s (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) character.
*Even Hirqal knew the respect of prophets. He said he would wash the feet of the Messenger (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) after hearing the account of Abū Sufyān ('...and if I could reach him definitely, I would go immediately to meet him and if I were with him, I would certainly wash his feet'). He also looked after the Prophet’s letter with great care.
*The story is a reminder of how influential peer pressure can sometimes be. It seems Hirqal succumbed to it, rather than surrendering to Allāh.
The Egyptian King Muqawqis

In Alexandria, Muqawqis received the Prophet’s letter via Hātib ibn Balta’ah (may Allāh be pleased with him). The letter read:

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم من محمد عبد الله ورسوله إلى موقوف عظم الاقتبس سلام على من اتبع البديه اما بعد فان ان دعوك

بدعاء الإسلام أسلم تسلم يعفي الله اجرك مرتين فان توليت فعليكم اتم الاقتبس ياهل الكتاب تعالوا إلى كلمة سواء بيننا و

بيتكم الا نعبد إلا الله ولا نشرك به شيا و لا يخذب بعضنا بعضا اربابا من دون الله فان تولوا فقولوا اشهدوا بنا مسلمون

In the name of Allāh, the most Merciful, the most Compassionate. From Muhammad, the Messenger of Allāh, to Muqawqis, the king of Copts. Salam upon the one who seek to follow guidance. I indeed call you to Islam. Become a Muslim, you will find peace and Allāh will give you two sets of rewards. And if you turn away, then upon you is the sin of the Copts. O people of the book! Come to a word that is just between us, that we worship none but Allāh, and that we associate no partners with Him, and that none of us shall take others as lords besides Allāh. Then, if they turn away, say 'Bear witness that we are Muslim.'

Muqawqis treated the letter with respect by placing it in an ivory box. He arranged for an Arabic scribe and wrote the following back to the Prophet:

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم لحمد عبد الله من الموقوف عظم الاقتبس سلام عليك اما بعد قد شكلت كتابك وفهمت ما ذكرت فيه و

ما تدعو اليا وقد علمت ان نبي يتبلي وكتب اظن انه يخرج بالشام وقد أكرمت رسولك وبعثت الياك بجاريتين لهما مكان في

الاقتبس عظم وكسوته واهديت الياك بغلة تتركبها و السلام عليك

In the name of Allāh, the most Merciful, the most Compassionate. To Muhammad, the servant of Allāh, from Muqawqis, the king of Copts.

Salam be upon you. I have read your letter and I have understood what you mentioned in it and what you are calling me to. I knew a prophet was coming [but] I thought he would emerge from Syria. I have shown hospitality to your messenger. I am sending two female servants to you [as a gift], both have an esteemed rank in our society. I am also sending you a garment and I am gifting you a mule to ride on. Peace be upon you.

The slave girl was Māriya, who later became the bondmaid of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him). After she gave birth to Ibrāhīm, she was freed. The other girl was called Sirīn, who married the poet Hassān ibn Thābit, and was the mother of Abd al-Rahmān. The mule was white and stayed alive till the reign of Mu’āwiya.

Did he accept Islam? He showed utmost respect but it seems he did not accept Islam. It is reported that he said لولا الملك لاسلمت (Were it not for my kingdom, I would accept Islam).
The Persian King, Parvez.

The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allâh be upon him) sent his Companion Abd Allâh ibn Huzâfa to the Persian King. The letter was as follows:

In the name of Allâh, the most Compassionate, the most Merciful. From Muhammad, the Messenger of Allâh to Chosroe, the King of Persia. Salam upon the one who seeks guidance, who believes in Allâh, and testifies that there is no God except Allâh, alone, the One who has no partners, and that Muhammad is his servant and messenger. For I call you to Islam, for I am the Messenger of Allâh to people collectively, so that I can warn those who are alone and so that the word can come true on the disbelievers. Become a Muslim, you will find peace. And if you say no, then upon you is the sin of the Majusis.

Parvez was angry when he read the letter. In a burst of rudeness, he remarked ‘how can a slave of mine write to me and ask me to believe in him?’ Parvez showed no respect to the letters and instead tore it to pieces.

When the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allâh be upon him) heard of his rudeness, he simply said, ‘He has torn my letter into pieces, Allâh has torn his kingdom into pieces.’

Parvez contacted his governor (called Bâzan) in Yemen and told him that a person near his region had written a letter claiming to be a Prophet. Parvez’s instructions to Bâzan was to find Muhammad and to bring him to him as soon as possible. Bâzan sent his minister called Bânawiyah, along with another man who had Persian descent. His name was Khur Kusro The two set off to find Muhammad.

When the two reached Ta’if, they asked about Muhammad. The Qurayshi leaders also happened to be there at the time, the likes of Safwân ibn Umayya and Abû Sufyân. They told Khur Kusro and Bânawiyah that Muhammad is in al-Madina. As they left, the Qurayshis rubbed their hands in glee. They thought that the end of Muhammad is imminent, since even Persian King is against him now.

Bânawiyah and his aide reached al-Madina. The Prophet ensured they were subject to excellent hospitality and they met him the following morning.

The two explained that Bâzan had sent them to al-Madina because he had been commanded by his senior Parvez. The two requested Muhammad to come with them to Bâzan. If he did, then Bâzan could ensure special treatment and hearing when he reached Parvez. Bâzan was willing to write a letter to Parvez that would ensure ease for Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allâh be upon him). If he refused, the two explained, then the chances were Muhammad and his community would be destroyed by Parvez.

Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allâh be upon him) heard this confrontational and threatening dialogue and responded with a smile. He remained calm and simply invited the two to Islam. The two tried to show assertiveness in their dialogue with the Prophet, but inside they were shaking. They were overcome by the awe of the Prophet. They kept asking for Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allâh be upon him) to come with them. The Prophet said that the conversation will continue in the morning.
That night, Jibrīl (peace be upon him) appeared in the presence of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and told him that Allāh had brought death to Parvez, killed by his own son in a knife attack. In the morning, when the Prophet met Khur Kusro and Bānawiyya, he instructed them to return to Bāzan, and to pass on the message that Parvez has been killed by his own son. In intrinsic detail, the Prophet told them the time he was killed too. The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) had an additional message for Bāzan too; that his land would soon be ruled by the Muslims. If he accepted Islam, then his sultanate would remain there.

When Khur Kusro and Bānawiyya were about to return to Bāzan, they were given lavish gifts by the Messenger of Allāh. They reached Bāzan and told him everything that had happened. Bāzan replied that this is not the words and workings of a king, but that of a prophet. If what he says is true, he explained, then he would be the first to accept faith. Only a few days later, Bāzan received a letter from Parvez's son, Shirwaîh. In it, he informed Bāzan that he had killed his father Parvez, by stabbing him in the stomach. Moreover, he was demanding Bāzan to accept him as the new king. When Bāzan read this letter, he was convinced that Muhammad is the final messenger of Allāh. He and many other Persians accepted Islam, and he passed this glad-tidings on to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him).

Conclusion

All letters were void of pride and arrogance. They were straightforward and to the point. Many had Qur’ānic verses in them or paraphrases of the Qur’ān.

The letters were tailor made. They were not broadcast messages. They were not copy and paste jobs.

None could be described as provocative and challenging to a debate.

The messenger sent with each letter was just as important as the letter itself. They were people who knew the traditions and language best. What we learn from this is that when propagating Islam, the medium is just as important as the message.

The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) carefully thought about which medium to use and how. The process was thoughtful, intricate and personal. Hātīb was the medium, the messenger to Muqawqis. He was chosen for his excellent traits. Thanks to his character, Māriya and Sirīn became Muslims even before they reached al-Madina.

Always respect the name of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him). Otherwise an outcome like Parvez’s awaits. The likes of al-Najāshī understood the importance of tabbaruk. They preserved the letters, precisely because they were now letters of distinction and blessings.

When doing Tablīgh, he (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) highlighted what they had in common, not the differences. For example, in the letter sent to al-Najāshī (Christian), he wrote (Ziā al-Nabī (Urdu) 4:183)
When he sent a letter to Hirql, the emperor of Rome, again he highlighted the similarities between Muslims and Christians. Today’s propagation of Islam perhaps lacks this. We are keen to highlight our differences rather than similarities. The Prophet’s methodology was different. He drew on similarities.

*All the Prophet’s letters were successful. The letter to Muqawqis opened up Egypt and North Africa to Islam. It also helped the Coptic Christians there. Thanks to the gift of Máriya, Muslims relationships with Coptic Christians were good and still are today. Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) said: ‘Deal with the Copts fairly…’ due to the peace treaty and the blood relations (Beloved Wives of the Sublime Messenger, M.I.H. Pirzada, 112).